Third Italian Island Surrenders to Allies

Linosa Gives Up Without Firing Of Single Shot

Panicky Garrison of 140 Soldiers Glad To Get Out of War

Americans Bomb Sicily Which May Be Next Allied Objective

By DANIEL DE LUCE

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, June 13 (AP)—Italy lost her third island outpost in the Central Mediterranean in three days when a British destroyer accepted the bloodless surrender of Linosa today, and fleets of American bombers and fighters began "itching their knockout punch to Sicily."

Without a shell being fired or a bomb dropped, the panicky garrison of 140 Italian soldiers and sailors raised white flags on the little speck of land 105 miles south of Sicily and won the bridge of his speedy gray ship, the destroyer Nubian, commander J. R. J. Tyrwhitt accepted the enemy capitulation.

Garrison Taken Off

The garrison, grateful for having been spared the ordeal of bombs and shells such as produced the surrender of Pantelleria on Friday and the lightning fall of Lampedusa about thirty hours later, was immediately taken off and transported to Allied prison camps.

The tiny island, only about two miles across in either direction, had been capable of sheltering only a larger than a motor torpedo boat and was believed to be without air fields or important military installations. Its normal population of about 500 is mostly engaged in raising cattle.

The peaceful relinquishment of Linosa, twenty-eight miles north-east of Lampedusa, completed the "island-a-day" conquest of Italian stepping stones paving the Mediterranean narrows.

A fourth island, Lampedusa, eight miles west of Lampedusa, was not mentioned in this dispatch. It is one of the Pelagie group, to which Linosa and Lampedusa belonged. It is even smaller than the other two, however, and may not even be inhabited now.

Five Men Killed In Bomber Crash

SALINAS, Calif., June 13 (AP)—Four officers and one enlisted man were killed in the crash of a four-engine bomber last night, the Salinas army air base, home field for the plane, announced today. Three other enlisted men were injured.

The plane was making a forced landing, due to engine trouble, when the accident occurred.

The dead included:

Second Lieut. Joseph H. Comer, Jr.; wife, Vivian Comer, Locust Hill Farm, Monrovia, Md.

Pfc. John N. Prindze; mother, Mrs. Catherine Prindze, 205 East Lafayette ave., Baltimore, Md.

Yankee Named Cohen Gets Credit For the Surrender of Lampedusa

By RELMAN MORIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, June 13 (AP)—A fellow named Cohen who captured Lampedusa island from the Italians yesterday and has passed to prove it is Sgt. Sidney Cohen, 22-year-old RAP pilot, who was a little bewildered by it all today.

Already named "King of Lampedusa" by his mates, Cohen told how the Italian garrison surrendered to him yesterday, hours before the formal capitulation to British landing forces.

With two mates, Sgt. Peter Cates, a Scotsman, and Sgt. Leslie Wright, he was flying a swordfish plane on a sea rescue mission when the compass "had a fit of Greenhills."

His gasoline was running low, and Cohen began looking for land and spotted Lampedusa.

He didn't know for sure that it was Lampedusa until he had sat

WLB To Consider Portal-to-Portal Pay Issue Today

May Modify $1.30 a Day Agreement or Appeal to Courts

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—War Labor Board renews tomorrow its consideration of the portal-to-portal pay issue involving the nation's soft coal miners—crux of a prolonged wage controversy—with indications tonight pointing to a decision by midweek.

On the board's ruling—and the speed with which President Roosevelt acts upon a new anti-strike measure outlawing walkouts in the government-operated mines—may hinge the possibility of another shutdown in the coal fields after the expiration of a truce Saturday midnight.

May Appeal to Courts

Informed sources expect the board either to toss out the underground pay issue on the contention that it is a matter for the courts to settle, or to modify sharply the $1.30 a day portal-to-portal pay agreement which John L. Lewis, chief of the United Mine Workers, has made with the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association.

Public members of the board are represented as believing that $1.30 a day portal-to-portal pay cannot be justified under the stabilization program. At the time the board ruled out a flat wage increase for the miners May 25, Chairman William H. Davis emphasized that any settlement of the travel time pay issue would have to be in the nature of an out-of-court settlement of a lawsuit, with data showing the settlement was made on that point and was not a hidden wage increase. Subsequently, negotiations between the operators and miners were broken off.

May Use New Law

Since Lewis set the deadline for the industry's latest truce Congress has approved and sent to the president legislation outlawing strikes in government-operated industries and imposing penalties for anyone instigating walkouts. Whether the measure may be used in the coal

American Ship Production at All-Time Peak

Coming Out at Rate of 21,000,000 Tons a Year Vickers Says

BALTIMORE, June 13 (AP)—Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickers, vice-chairman of the Maritime Commission, disclosed today that in May merchant ships were being delivered from United States shipyards "at a rate exceeding 21,000,000 tons a year."

In presenting the commission's gold eagle pennant for ship-production excellence to the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards, Inc., in Baltimore, Vickers added that "the more than 15,000,000 tons built by United States merchant shipyards since Pearl Harbor approximately a quarter of all the shipping the entire world possessed at the time of our entry into the war."

"I leave it to your imagination where he might be if that 15,000,000 tons had not been built."

The presentation ceremony was highlighted by the launching of the Liberty ship Robert J. Collier, named in honor of the late president of P. F. Collier and Son, and publisher of Collier's Weekly.

The ship—152nd of its type to be launched at the yard—was constructed in twenty-five days. It was sponsored by Collier's widow.

Bethlehem-Fairfield was the first coast shipyard to receive the eagle pennant, and the third in the nation. J. M. Willis, vice president and general manager of the corporation, announced during the ceremonies that the yard had set as a goal for June the launching of twenty Liberty ships and the delivery of nineteen of the 10,500-ton cargo vessels.

German Bombers Fail in Attack On British Ship

Paul Lee Describes Dive-bombing Raid of Nazi Airmen

By PAUL KERN LEE

ABOARD THE BRITISH DESTROYER LOOKOUT, June 13 (AP)—Twenty-five German dive-bombers shook us until our teeth rattled in a moonlight attack last night off captured Lampedusa, but the only damage was some broken crockery.

The Junkers II were seeking retaliation for this ship's capture of little Lampedusa earlier yesterday, and today we've just learned that friends aboard the destroyer Nubian captured Linosa—the third Italian island to fall in as many days.

The officers aboard this ship effected Lampedusa's surrender yesterday, and then were assigned to patrol alone off the island in case the guards ashore had any trouble.

At 9:35 p. m. the Germans struck. I was in the ship's office when the alarm sounded and rushed to the bridge just in time to see and escape the machine-gunning swoop of the first plane.

Explosions Rock Ship

A second plane dived and released its bombs with a blood-chilling screech. The destroyer swerved. The bombs missed but their explosions rocked the ship as if some giant hand had reached out of the sea to shake us until our teeth chattered.

For the next half hour I watched a battle fascinating in its deadly danger. The bombers drove in at all angles, releasing big bombs and small clusters of anti-personnel explosives, and firing their cannon and machineguns.

Every gun on this ship was talking back with a roar. Vivid flashes lighted the entire area.

Other Ships Away
The Axis airmen obviously had hoped to catch the entire naval squadrons here at Lampedusa, but the other vessels were off on various missions.

Lieut. Commander George Forman of London, our captain, leaned on binnacle, calmly directing: "starboard 15; port 20 midships."

His maneuvering skill saved us from the bomb hail which touched off geysers all around us. Fragments showered our decks.

All their bombs expended, the raiders finally departed, and our patrolling ship was rejoined today by the flagship.

Communists Urge Early Accord in Camps of French

Leaders in Algiers Demand DeGaulle and Giraud Get Together

By RELMAN MORIN

ALGIERS, June 13 (AP)—Twenty-six French Communist deputies demanded publicly today a quick solution of the dispute between Gen. Charles De Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud, charging that the French armed forces still are led by "generals and admirals who believed in the fall of the Anglo-Americans."

Their statement also called upon the now deadlocked French executive body to "transform immediately its solemn promises into facts," and declared that their group had been ignored by the French committee for national liberation.

The deputies presumably are not identified with either of the De Gaulle or Giraud cliques, but it's generally considered that DeGaulle enjoys their full support, and their demands dovetail with that Fighting French general's call for a sweeping purge of officers in the army.

The manifesto thus tended to support DeGaulle's position at a time when he and Giraud are at odds over the division of authority for the armed forces and the method of eliminating pro-Vichy officers.

The Communist statement said that the "French people have had enough of personal power—they want neither a Petain nor a Bonaparte. . . . The people of Metropolitan France have not endured famine and deportation, nor sacrificed their lives in order to see reappear at the head of the army and navy those generals and admirals who fired on Allied troops and served Petain, the traitor."

"In France there is heroic courage among the masses," the manifesto added. "In Algeria there is capitulation to avidity and the rivalry of sordid egotisms."

Italians Attack German Transport

LONDON, Monday, June 14 (AP)—The Russian agency Tass said in a Moscow broadcast early today that an Italian garrison in the Dodecanese islands of the Eastern Mediterranean had fired on German troops sent to reinforce them.

The broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor, quoted reports from Istanbul that the Italians had scored hits on a German troop transport off Rhodes.

Four Earthquakes Off Coast of Japan

ST. LOUIS, June 13 (AP)—Four earthquakes off the coast of Japan one of which Seismologist Florence Robertson declared would have caused "tremendous damage" on land, were recorded today on the St. Louis University seismograph.

Miss Robertson estimated the quakes occurred about 600 miles from St. Louis on a direct line with Sendai, north of Tokyo, which would place them about 500 miles off the coast in a depression known as the "Japan trench," origin of several large tidal waves in the past.

Organized Labor To Bring Strong Demands against Anti-Strike Bill

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—Organized labor is expected to make direct demands to President Roosevelt that he veto the bill to outlaw strikes in government-operated air factories and curb walkouts in privately controlled industries.

The bill received its final approval on Capitol Hill last night, and it is expected to be signed by Speaker Rayburn and Vice President Wallace tomorrow and put on Mr. Roosevelt's desk.

Generally, speculation at the capital was that the bill would become law, either by the president's signature or by allowing it to become law without his signature after the ten-day interim provided for in the constitution.

May Make Statement

There was a definite probability that whatever course the president chooses—signing, allowing the measure to become law automatically or veto—Mr. Roosevelt would have

London Editors Demand End of French Quarrel

Beaverbrook's Newspaper Takes Lead in New Move for Unity

LONDON, Monday, June 14 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook's London Express asserted in an editorial today that Generals Charles DeGaulle and Henri Giraud "should stop fighting among themselves and help us get on with winning the war."

"There is a great deal of impatience in Britain at the extraordinary delays and procrastinations which have happened since DeGaulle reached Africa," the newspaper said.

"The glorious vision of united action which setting up of the French committee created has deteriorated into a wordy impasse."

The Express added that while DeGaulle has many admirable qualities, "he has never taken great pains to control his impetuous temperament."

The Daily Sketch in a front-page story by its diplomatic correspondent joined the Express in the sharpest criticism of DeGaulle yet to appear in London newspapers.

The Sketch said that the slow progress of the French leaders in North Africa was noted with "some concern" in London and declared that "it is essential at this critical stage of the war that General Eisenhower shall not be hampered by jarring personal interests."

Asserting that so far the amount of unity achieved owes little to Gen. DeGaulle himself, the Sketch criticized his "over-dictatorial and non-cooperative attitude."

Frills and Style Variations Must Go, OWI Asserts

War's Grip on American Household Soon To Be Tightened

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—War's strong grip on the American household will tighten even more, the Office of War Information disclosed tonight in announcing hundreds of more items used in homes will be "simplified" in 1943 by elimination of frills and style variations.

The agency said that about 500 of the 1,000 items picked as candidates for possible simplification this year—compared with twenty in 1942—reach directly into the home and include:

Auto: jacks, automotive repair tools, household brushes, children's sportswear and rayon dresses, nails and screws, stationery, facial tissue, wrapping paper, paper napkins and towels, radio replacement parts, safety shoes, screens, scissors, silver-plated flatware, towels and wheelbarrows.

Quantity Limited

The OWI, explaining the purpose of simplification is to conserve war-essential materials, manpower and machines, said:

"While it appears that the civilian will continue to have his basic needs fulfilled there will be increased limitations or variety if not on quantity."

War production board officials, according to the OWI, have estimated that 1943 simplifications will save thousands of carloads of transportation space, millions of square feet of factory warehouse space, will add to the country's stockpile of raw materials by reducing inventory requirements 25 percent, and will increase the total productive capacity of the nation's machines by ten to twenty percent.

Simplifications already carried out in this war, the OWI said, reach from "the cradle to the grave."

"The new-born babe now rides in a carriage in which the iron and steel is limited to nine pounds while his great-grandfather is transported to the grave in a casket limited in length to twenty-five inches, in width twenty-two inches, and in depth to twenty inches."

The agency listed the following savings in critical materials by simplification and curtailment orders on consumer and industrial items:

Steel—600,000 tons; copper—17,000 tons; solder—35,000 pounds; cloth—180,000,000 yards; pulp—227,000 tons; lumber—450,000,000 board feet; tung-

The pope spoke on "The Church and Labor." The Vatican radio had announced he would address "one of the largest assemblies to which any Pope has granted audience," consisting of 15,000 or more Italian workers gathered in the Vatican garden.

"Working men and women conscious of their great responsibility for the common good," Pope Pius said, "continue their work and persevere in it with discipline and calm, thus contributing invaluable support to the tranquility and support of all in the social fabric."

He said the Church has had to warn "against letting oneself be lulled by the mirage of specious and fatuous theories and visions of future well being and against the deceptive enticements of false prophets of social prosperity, who call evil good and good evil and who, boasting that they are the friends of the people, do not agree with those mutual agreements between capital and labor, employers and employees, which maintain and promote social concord for their common progress and advantage."

"Such friends of the people you have already heard in the public streets, in clubs, in Congresses," the pope said. "When have the facts answered to their words or reality to their hopes? Deception and illusion have been and are the lot of private individuals and peoples who have trusted them."

"Such false prophets would have us believe that salvation must come from a revolution which shall overturn social order and assume a national character."

Mrs. O'Connor Explains Her Trip In Maryland-Owned Automobile

BALTIMORE, June 13 (AP)—The state Office of Price Administration announced today that information concerning an automobile trip to Charleston, S. C. taken by the wife of Governor Herbert R. O'Connor, would be turned over to a Baltimore ration board for its action.

Mrs. O'Connor said yesterday that she took the trip to South Carolina late in March on the advice of her physician. She added that the journey was made in a state-owned automobile.

Cornelius P. Mundy, chief enforcement attorney of the state OPA, in announcing the matter would be turned over to the ration board, said:

Do Much Damage But Lose Record Number of Planes

Eighth U. S. Air Force in Greatest Air Battle of the War

RAF Also Raids Key Points Vital to German Industry

By LEWIS HAWKINS

LONDON, June 13 (AP)—Two large formations of American heavy bombers smashed down many German fighters and blasted the Nazi-U-boat bases at Bremen and Kiel today in the greatest air battle ever waged by the Eighth United States Air Force.

The two sky fleets flew unescorted to the heavily defended North German bases for the double-barreled daylight attack. The cost was twenty-six four-engine bombers, the most severe loss ever suffered by the Eighth U. S. Air Force in a single day's operations.

"The attack occasioned the greatest air battle in which Eighth Air Force heavy bombers has yet participated and against the largest concentration of enemy fighters," said the United States communiqué.

Bremen and Kiel, which account for a considerable percentage of the Nazi war machine's U-boat production and servicing, "were bombed effectively and many enemy fighters were destroyed," the bulletin said.

Record American Loss

The largest loss ever suffered before by American heavy bombers in a single raid was the sixteen downed during the last previous attack on Bremen, April 17.

While deploring the heavy loss of men and equipment in the run to Kiel, Brig. Gen. Frederick Anderson, commander of a Flying Fortress wing, said the "price was not too high for the results achieved."

"Not only did we hit important submarine installations at Kiel but we also drew off practically all enemy aircraft in the area so that the other formation was able to do a splendid job at Bremen with little opposition."

Kiel is about 100 miles north of Bremen, and to get to it the huge squadrons had to fly a round trip of approximately 1,000 miles.

RAF Loses Twenty-four Bombers

The two-way assault increased the momentum of the newest aerial offensive against Hitler's war plants, following by only a few hours a heavy night attack by the RAF heavyweights on Bochum and other key points in Germany's industrial area.

Policeman Dies After Assault

BALTIMORE, June 13 (AP)—Four men were held today for questioning in connection with the fatal assault last night on a Baltimore policeman.

Patrolman William J. Woodcock, 55, died in a hospital early today as a result of injuries he received in a scuffle, police said.

The four held were named by police authorities as Ronald Harris, 39; Wesley M. Dixon, 38; Amos H. Morey, 35; and Lewis E. Crites, 43, all of Baltimore.

Police quoted Woodcock as saying in a short period of consciousness before his death that he had arrested one man when someone tore his nightstick from him and struck him over the head. The person alleged to have hit Woodcock was not identified.

"The matter will be determined by the proper tribunal. It will be submitted to the board where the rationations were issued."

Judge Emory H. Niles (chairman of the board) will select a panel for the hearing. Judge Niles will act as chairman of the panel.

"Because this is a pending matter, I can make no further statement. From this point on the matter rests with the board."

Yesterday, the following statement, signed by Mrs. O'Connor, was issued at the governor's executive offices in Annapolis, said, in part:

Lampedusa Falls After Short, but Furious Assault

Italians Fight Back for a Time, but Later Decide to Quit

By PAUL KERN LEE

LAMPEDUSA, June 12—(Delayed)—A handful of 120 men in the Italian military, naval and marine personnel numbering from 4,000 to 5,000 who surrendered a half hour ago.

They are now filing out from their shore-side pillboxes and guns. It took only two minutes—as quickly as the terms could be understood—for the Italian garrison to agree to unconditional surrender.

Lieut. Hugh A. Corbett of the Royal navy and I leaped ashore from the destroyer lookouts' launch and after the rapid parley the lieutenant signalled to the sea. He then went out and escorted in a company of famous Coldstream Guards in landing craft that had hovered offshore all day.

Shell Island at Night

Hardly had the total success of Pantelleria's capture been clinched than naval forces sped to Lampedusa and inflicted a night shelling between aerial bombings. Twice during the night and again at dawn the ships hurled explosives ashore.

Lampedusa's shore guns, in contrast with those of Pantelleria, replied spiritedly and with dangerous accuracy. Burning oil fires ashore, star shells from ships, and the splash of Italian projectiles into the sea made a theatrical spectacle with booming guns and screaming shells as an overture.

See White Flag

The aerial attack continued all day today and in the evening the warships bombarded a fourth time. The last bombers reported what appeared to be a white cross being formed at the Lampedusa Airfield and said it was believed there were white flags but could not be certain.

The naval squadron's flagship came closer alongside the destroyer where I was a passenger and megaphoned instructions to our ship to send a boat into the harbor under a white flag.

The boat officer directed that a demand be made for unconditional and immediate surrender on pain of a prompt resumption of the bombing and bombardments. He also instructed the boat to withdraw if the Italians showed any fight and in any case to withdraw before Allied bombers due at that hour, failed to get the cancellation signal.

Sheet for White Flag

Several ships, including the cruiser Penelope, departed on other missions before our boat went in with a sheet from the bed of the captain, Lieut. Comdr. A. George Forman, made into a white flag and hoisted at the masthead of our destroyer. Another sheet, doubled, was put on a pole for the use of the boat.

The destroyer then sped direct to the harbor mouth and lowered the launch.

The boat was manned by eight happy seamen commanded by Lieut. Corbett, 26. Peter Beach, 18, of Maldenhead, handled the tiller while I and a British army movie photographer went as passengers.

A white flag fluttered from a crude staff on the point beside the breakwater.

An Italian boat, its battle flag awaying idly at half-mast, rowed by two seamen and containing a mappy Italian marine officer and naval officer, both armed with pistols, came alongside the launch.

Lieutenant Goes Ashore

The marine called, "follow please" and led the way through the boom defense. Lieut. Corbett, natty in dress blues with a stiff, white collar, hopped nimbly ashore and smartly returned the salute given by a gray-bearded, uniformed patriarch. He stood on a landing platform surrounded by a little knot of nondescript Italian soldiers, sailors and marines.

"Are you the governor?" the lieutenant asked.

In badly broken English the gray-bearded man replied, "no, signore."

"Do you want to surrender?" the lieutenant asked.

Glad To Surrender

"Si, si, si," replied the Italian vehemently. "We take you to govern fifteen minutes distance."

"You jolly well will not," said the lieutenant. "He's the one who wants to surrender so let him come here or I am prepared to accept an unconditional surrender from you. If you do not accept the attack will be resumed."

The Italian shrugged and plucked his long curly beard like an old testament prophet and rejoined, "very well, I no choice—governor's English poor anyhow."

The lieutenant signalled the destroyer and went out to bring the landing craft inside. The Italian troops with his hand and the greasy, grimy, weary men in dirty green uniforms began clambering over their shattered but still effective shore fortification, dragging the guns they trained on us during the parley. Through the rubble ruins of the town they marched to assemble on the open square before a twenty-foot cross in memorial to the World war.

Police Hold Man

John W. Cannon, 25, Knox street, was arrested at 2:30 p. m. yesterday by Detective B. F. Gaffney and Sgt. R. R. Johnston. He was detained at police headquarters as held for the United States Army.

Sicily Probably Next Objective Of Allied Drive

Believed Likely To Figure in Plans To Knock Out Italy

By CARL C. CRANMER

American and British airmen, who took the scalps of Pantelleria and Lampedusa without the intervention of a single infantryman, already have raised their sights to bigger objectives farther north.

The world seems about to witness an attempt to repeat in Sicily what was accomplished on a smaller scale at Pantelleria and Lampedusa. It may succeed, and if it does the effect on Allied plans may be revolutionary and Allied hopes will soar. But even if it doesn't quite come off, Allied strategists at least will have a good idea of what air power actually can do.

Sicily Probable Objective

Sicily would seem to be a more likely objective of pure air siege than Sardinia. Sicily is only about ninety miles from the nearest point in Tunisia, whereas Sardinia is about 120. Malta and Pantelleria are only about sixty miles from Sicily, while Tripoli is 280. From all these platforms Sicily can be hammered by a converging attack.

The new target is not to be compared with Pantelleria in area, size of population, strength of garrison or natural and prepared defenses. It is not dependent on outside sources for any of its water. It is separated from the mainland only by the narrow twenty-four-mile-long Messina strait.

Yet it may not be impossible to knock out Sicily from the air, provided British naval forces are able to lend an aiding hand around a considerable part of the island's circumference and provided Allied air strength and timetable allow for an even heavier and more prolonged bombardment than was directed at Pantelleria.

Sicily has an area of only a little over 9,000 square miles. It is 150 miles long—about that of Long Island—and just over 100 miles wide at its eastern end. In its central portion it is only about fifty miles across.

Population Is 4,000,000

Into this comparatively small area a population of more than 4,000,000 people normally is crowded. Some of these have fled or been evacuated to safer areas. But a garrison of perhaps 100,000 men has been added.

It was on an area not much smaller than this that Allied air forces went to work last April after the Eighth Army had driven north to Enfidaville. The area was so blanketed with bombs that the enemy air forces were driven out of Tunisia. And thereafter the morale of a strong fighting force, mostly German, was broken.

Sicily's harbors, airfields, power plants and communications facilities already have been put badly out of order by heavy bombing. It does not seem at all beyond the power of the Allied air forces to put the Sicilian air bases out of commission. With hundreds of planes bombing and strafing objectives day after day it would seem that life would be made unbearable for the garrison as well as the population after awhile.

Rabaul Bombed On Large Scale

Allies Drop 30 Tons of Explosives on Japanese Position

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, June 14 (AP)—Four-engined Allied bombers dropped nearly thirty tons of explosives on Rabaul, New Britain, in a two-hour night raid Sunday, the high command reported today.

Rabaul is the big Japanese harbor and airbase base at the northeast tip of New Britain island.

The noon communiqué reported two small attacks by Japanese planes on Allied bases. Four planes raided Port Moresby and three struck at Gona on the northeast coast of New Guinea. Neither attack caused any damage.

Both raids were made at night. Six bombs were dropped in the Port Moresby area but all fell harmlessly in the bush.

The attack at Rabaul was directed at Vunakanau airbase. Explosives and incendiaries were dropped on the runway and dispersal areas among grounded planes.

"Numerous large fires were started and were visible for fifty miles," the communiqué said. "Searchlight and anti-aircraft defenses were active."

"We had no losses."

Allied planes also bombed Gasmata airbase, destroying an enemy bomber on the ground, and strafed and bombed enemy tracks and trails in the Komiatum area.

Refining Strike Is Declared Off

HOUSTON, Texas, June 13 (AP)—Employees of the Shell Refinery at Deer Park went back to work today after company and union officials agreed to arbitrate a dispute over discharge of a worker.

The big plant, manufacturing aviation gasoline and other war products, had been idle two days. The 1,200-employee walkout began at 8 a. m. Friday.

Do Much Damage

trial Ruhr valley. The night raid cost the RAF twenty-four bombers but the Germans themselves conceded that it caused heavy damage.

New blows also were rained on other enemy targets throughout France and the Low Countries by daylight today. American and British fighters and British medium bombers shuttled over the channel in a seemingly endless stream to hammer enemy installations in these operations which went on virtually all day.

The United States communiqué telling of today's dual bombing assault said "very strong enemy fighter opposition" was "concentrated largely against the formation attacking Kiel."

Pilots participating in the Bremen attack said enemy ground fire was "so thick you could almost walk on it," but the fighter opposition there was light.

Smoke Screens Fail

At Bremen the Germans again attempted to supplement their ground defenses with smoke-pot smoke screens but as usual they merely served to help the attackers to their mark.

Reports of RAF crewmen on the night raid on Bochum indicated the Nazis have thrown still more guns, searchlights and planes into the Ruhr in a desperate effort to check the devastating Allied air offensive before it completes Prime Minister Churchill's experiment to bomb Germany out of the war.

The Bochum raid was not on the record scale of the Dusseldorf-Muenster attack by the RAF the previous night, but still was heavy enough to pour in 4,000-pound bombs at the rate of five per minute at the peak of the assault, which also delivered tens of thousands of incendiaries and smaller bombs.

Reconnaissance flights over the Dusseldorf-Muenster area late yesterday showed fires still burning from the Friday night raid.

An air ministry communiqué said the RAF carried out "large scale offensive operations" over Northern France and the Low Countries today.

Bag German Planes

Many squadrons of fighters supported these operations and two of them were lost along with two of the bombers. Spitfires downed one enemy fighter and a four-engine Focke-Wulf reconnaissance plane was bagged by two RAF Mosquitos.

(The German radio, telling of the attack on Bremen and Kiel, declared that at least fifteen American "superbombers" were shot down and that they were "so effectively intercepted that most machines were forced to jettison their bombs."

Bremen, with its concentration of submarine and airplane factories has been one of the principal targets of the Allied air offensive, having been raided 104 times since the war began. The last previous assault on the port was made by American heavies on April 17, an operation that cost sixteen German fighters shot down.

Kiel, great shipbuilding center, had been bombed on seventy-three previous occasions, twice by American bombers in daylight precision attacks.

Bochum, object of last night's pounding by the British, is a center of Germany's coal, iron and steel industry, eleven miles west of the battered Dortmund. It has a population of more than 300,000, with tens of thousands employed in the big chemical factories and branches of the Krupp's armament works.

"But they saw the markings on our wing and swerved away."

"The next chapter was pattern bombing by the big boys. After that was over our Tyrolean friend reappeared and told us to get away at once."

"We thought it a good idea, too, and the 'eyebles' gave me a piece of paper signed by the commandant, guaranteeing the surrender and asking that we stop the bombardment."

"Those chaps were anxious that we deliver it to the proper authorities, and we promised that."

"Then we began cranking that Swordfish again, twisting the crank so hard we almost lost it off."

Cohen and his mates got their plane into the air and decided to try to reach Tunisia instead of returning to Malta. Their gas proved sufficient and they landed at an American base where "the king of Lampedusa" triumphantly produced his now celebrated Italian certificate of surrender.

Baltimore Man Has Thrilling Day on Bomber

Sgt. Keith R. Muir's Plane Badly Damaged but Reaches Home

BALTIMORE, June 13 (AP)—Sgt. Keith R. Muir of Baltimore was a member of the crew of a B-17 Flying Fortress that returned to its English base from an attack on Loriot, France, after it had been riddled by 169 bullets, had its antenna shot away, its windshield shattered by shell fragments and its right wing tip blasted by cannon fire.

The War department announced today that none of the crew was injured.

The ship, part of the United States Eighth Air Force, came down at an R.A.F. field in England with gasoline enough for only ten minutes more of flying.

As the bomber left the English coast enroute to the target, the supercharger and throttle began to function improperly. The War department said. However, it remained in the formation until fifteen minutes after the target had been reached, although the number two engine had cut out.

A forty-five-minute engagement with enemy fighter planes resulted in the damages to the Flying Fortress.

Crew members were huddled in Muir's radio room when the plane arrived in England, none of them injured despite the fact the oxygen supply in the room had been knocked out during the air battle.

Jack and Hannah Attended Communion For Young Daughter

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 13 (AP)—Jack and Hannah Dempsey forgot their divorce court differences for a short time today to attend the first communion of their young daughter, six-year-old Barbara.

Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, sat in a front pew on one side of the chapel of the academy and Hannah, occupied a front pew on the other side, as the mass was celebrated by the Rev. Charles J. Dean, vice president of Fordham university.

After the sacrament was administered to Barbara and four other little girls at the altar rail, both Barbara and eight-year-old Joan, who attended the academy, joined their mother and chatted. Then they joined their father, and returned with him to the Dempsey home in Scarsdale, N. Y.

Seversky Says Japan Can Be Bombed into Submission from Air

HOLLYWOOD, June 13 (AP)—Major Alexander P. De Seversky, airplane designer and advocate of increased air power, declared during a radio forum broadcast today that "Japan can be bombed into submission just as Pantelleria was."

He compared Japan to a fortress, surrounded by a moat, and said that to attempt to breach the defenses by land and sea without strong air power "would be far too costly in life, time and substance."

"As long as we fight along a surface strategy, with the weapons of land and sea, time is on the side of Japan," said Maj. De Seversky.

Rubber Situation Better, Jeffers Says

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—Rubber Director William M. Jeffers said today the nation's synthetic rubber plants will turn out 275,000 tons in 1943 and that by the fall of 1944, barring major setbacks, "we can safely forget the rubber problem so far as essential supply is concerned."

He placed in the essential category military and lend-lease requirements and transportation of farmers, produce and war workers.

The big problems ahead are the facilities, equipment and manpower to process rubber into essential products," Jeffers said in a blue network from "Washington Reports on Rationing."

Nation Observes Flag Day Today

Flag Day, annually dedicated to the Stars and Stripes, will be celebrated today with the added significance of tribute to the emblems of the nations united and embattled against the Axis.

President Roosevelt, in his proclamation setting aside June 14 for the observance, called on the nation to display jointly with Americans the flags of the United Nations, and pay them honor together as symbols of the "massed, angered forces of common humanity."

Howard, S. D. June 13 (AP)—Ten men were killed, six injured and another is unaccounted for when two airplanes collided near here this afternoon. The ten who were killed were all passengers in one plane while the seven who were in the other are all believed alive. One baled out and had not been accounted for in early reports.

The story of the crash was told to Miss Ella Esser, Howard telegraph operator, by the pilot who brought his plane to ground safely. He was cut and shaken but not seriously hurt. Five of his passengers were taken to a hospital at Mitchell.

The planes came to their landings six miles apart, one of them in flames.

Names of the victims were not available.

Martin Employees To Take Ballot Ordered by WLRB

Will State Their Choice on Collective Bargaining Agent

WASHINGTON, June 13 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board announced today that it had ordered an election to be held among workers at the huge Baltimore plant of the Glenn L. Martin Company to determine their choice of a collective bargaining agent.

The board's order stipulated that the election should be "conducted as early as possible" but not later than July 11, and that most of the company's employees not serving in a supervisory capacity were eligible to vote.

The employees will be given their choice of designating as their agent in collective bargaining the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (CIO), the International Association of Machinists or the Middle River Aeronautical Employees Association, Inc., an independent group. A space will be provided on the ballot for those who do not wish to be represented by any of the three labor organizations.

An NLRB hearing on the CIO group's petition for recognition was held in Baltimore last month. Today's directive was an outcome of this hearing, at which the two other organizations to be included on the ballot also sent representatives.

Those who signed the election order were Harry A. Mills, board chairman, and Gerard D. Reilly and John M. Houston, members.

The capture of Linoosa was told in these words: "A destroyer was off the island of Linoosa early this morning. White flags were flying and the surrender was accepted."

The number of prisoners captured on seven-mile-long, two-mile-wide Lampedusa had not yet been announced, but the communiqué said 2,800 of the more than 10,000 captured at Pantelleria had been received on the African mainland.

Axis Ships Attack

It disclosed that enemy naval craft put in their first appearance Friday night, attacking with torpedoes while light British coastal forces were patrolling the Sicilian straits to cover the evacuation operation.

The enemy forces fled at high speed, however, when the British patrols moved in for a strike.

The Italian communiqué, received here in a broadcast, declared German planes sank a transport of 8,000 tons and fourteen landing craft, and damaged three cruisers, six merchant ships and fourteen "minor warships" in attacks in the Sicilian channel.

Lewis Caused Action

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers (UMW) had no immediate comment. In the Senate debate yesterday, Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) said Congress never would have considered the legislation had it not been for the "offense of John L. Lewis in defying the constituted authority of this country in wartime."

One of the provisions of the measure gives to the War Labor Board the power to subpoena. Lewis, during the recent weeks of the coal dispute and strikes, has refused to accept the board's invitations to appear, nor have his aides been present at hearings held by the agency.

The measure also confers congressional authority on the administrative branch of government to seize mines or plants where labor trouble threatens or has brought about interruption of production—a procedure already used by the president in his order to secretary of mines to take over the nation's coal mines. Strikes then would be banned. Some UMW locals have walked out since government seizure of the coal mines.

Linoosa Gives Up

ish destroyers and cruisers was pouring in a deadly fire at intervals. American Flying Fortresses, Marauders, Lightnings and Warhawks began their assault on Sicily yesterday.

As in the opening attacks on Pantelleria, they turned their attention first to the enemy's air fields, and Allied headquarters said "large numbers" of the nearly 150 planes on the ground at Milo, Castelvetrano and Bocca Di Falco were riddled by fragmentation bombs exploded in their midst.

Malta's fighter-bombers also raided Marzamitti, in southeastern Sicily, where they attacked a small vessel with cannon fire, and Comiso, Sicily, where they hit road transport.

Not a single Allied aircraft was lost yesterday, either in the Sicilian assaults or in the blows that brought the surrender of Lampedusa.

Details of the surrender of Lampedusa, eighty miles south of Pantelleria, and the second island to give in to an unparalleled aerial and naval bombardment without a single Allied soldier being put ashore, were given in these words by the Allied communiqué:

Bombard Island

"Immediately after the surrender of Pantelleria, strong forces of medium and fighter bombers of the Northwest African air forces carried out attacks on Lampedusa. Four cruisers and six destroyers, including a Greek destroyer, bombarded the island during the night of June 11-12 and at frequent intervals throughout yesterday. Enemy batteries were in action, but ceased fire on being engaged."

"Following a heavy air attack, white flags were seen flying on the island and at about 7 o'clock the naval commander sent an officer ashore to negotiate the surrender."

The capture of Linoosa was told in these words: "A destroyer was off the island of Linoosa early this morning. White flags were flying and the surrender was accepted."

The number of prisoners captured on seven-mile-long, two-mile-wide Lampedusa had not yet been announced, but the communiqué said 2,800 of the more than 10,000 captured at Pantelleria had been received on the African mainland.

Pittsburgh Club Wins Amateur Soccer Title

BALTIMORE, June 13 (AP)—The Morgan Strasser Soccer Club, of Pittsburgh, Pa., won the amateur soccer championship of the United States today by defeating Baltimore's Santa Maria Knights of Columbus team, 4-1, before 1,500 fans in the Municipal stadium.

The single Baltimore goal, which came in the last two minutes of play on a foul shot, was the first scored on Morgan Strasser through the entire amateur cup series. Mike Pucker, inside right forward for Morgan Strasser, scored two goals and the other of the team's tallies were booted in by Felix Mitchell and Tony Monaco.

Morgan Strasser won the Pennsylvania state championship during the regular season with a record of fourteen victories and two defeats. The Pittsburghers reached the finals in the open championships, but were defeated, 3 to 2, in the final by the Hispano team two weeks ago in New York.

The American forces represented a relatively small group of "German" infantry and artillery fighting a delaying action against numerically superior armored columns of British, advancing on a waterway several miles wide.

Returning from their raid behind the lines, the Rangers were ordered to delay bridging operations along the waterway while the main body of troops took up positions to the south.

British officers observing the exercise praised the effectiveness with which the Rangers accomplished their mission and returned to their base with relatively few casualties.

other with virtually no observance of a middle-of-the-road type. The dealers cited many instances where people asked them to take the stamp and they would make their purchases later on. These requests had to be refused in compliance with rationing regulations. Many bought types of shoes which are certain not to be entirely satisfactory, with the thought of exchanging them at a more convenient time in mind. One worried customer, who had been waiting for almost two hours to be waited upon, asked a clerk if there was any danger of the stamp period's expiring before she could make her purchase. She was assured that the deadline was still a few hours away.

Materials Restricted
When asked about the future in store for coupon number 18, one manager stressed the restrictions in materials, styles and selection. While many, women in particular, await play shoe shipments, merchants and manufacturers say that they buy them at their own risk. Unrationed products must be made of unrestricted materials, with the inevitable result that the wearing qualities will be questionable, they say.

Full shoes are enjoying an early market, sales indicate, but the public is going to have to adjust to taking what it can get instead of what it wants. The popular moccasin sport shoe for both men and women cannot be made unless it has a rubber sole. . . . the wedgies that have found a big market must be covered with fabric. . . . no leathers may carry leather ornaments as well. . . . all ornaments must be of substitutes.

These are just a few of the many changes in store for the shoe show, dealers predict, as they look for the barefoot boy to become the man of the hour before October 31.

The Symbol Of Freedom

ONE of the most inspiring bursts of oratory preserved in American anthologies is that of Edward Everett, whose public service included an appointment as minister to Great Britain. He said he had seen much of the world's most sublime scenery and had viewed the outstanding examples of art and architecture in the capitals of Europe, but nothing had filled him with such deep emotion as "the sight of my country's flag in a foreign land."

Narrow, indeed, is the vision which cannot see in the Stars and Stripes something more than a few folds of colored bunting. It is a symbol of all the hard-ship and heroism of the pioneers who brought to a new world the concept of civil and religious freedom and established here a form of government which had no complete parallel in any land or time.

It is the outward and visible sign that under that flag the security of life, liberty and property shall remain inviolate. It is the embodiment of a compact among free-men that the system of individual initiative and private enterprise, which links the factory and the field, the laboratory with the little red school house, and has guided Americans to a standard of living which remains unrivalled, shall be protected from the withering blight of those political and economic heresies which elsewhere have left a train of heartache and frustration.

It is the rallying point for brave men and devoted women who stand ready for any sacrifice when the nation's traditional way of life is threatened and as such it has special significance in these hours of peril.

Tax Reaction Causes Worry

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH from New York city has noted that a number of economists and labor observers are considerably worried over what will be the reaction to the sudden shrinkage of pay checks that will accompany the withholding taxation which is to start the first of the coming month.

These observers are reported as fearful that the wage shrinkage will look like a decrease in pay to many, put a crimp in the war bond program and create new requests for wage increases.

While the average worker has been paying his income taxes, it is explained, he has been able to take the money home and look at it before Uncle Sam got it. Under the new system, he will not even see it. And he will know that additional taxes must be paid as a result of the unjust carry-over on part of last year's yard-stick. Labor will be quick to note, these sources say, that the amounts taken from wages—because of higher wages this year than last and because only basic exemptions are used in figuring amounts withheld—are larger in total for the last half of 1943 than were payments in the first half based on 1942 incomes.

Some observers believe, according to the dispatch, that the new slice off pay checks, coming as it does on the heels of wide-spread labor disputes based on wages will "look like a pay cut" and that the main effect of the tax will be to "crystallize and exaggerate the steadily heightening labor crisis."

They are not far from the realities in their prognostications, which tally with what this newspaper declared when the unjust new tax measure was finally concocted. But of course, the only thing we can do now is, in the words of a homely philosopher, "to see what we shall see"; and, if the labor unrest develops as feared, it certainly should give some useful hints for the framing of a new and more equitable tax bill.

Nazis Are Bearing A Double Handicap

VARIOUS EXAMINATIONS of the temperament of the German people as manifested in their history during the last hundred years have convinced some scientists that they are afflicted with a mass mental illness which makes them a menace to world peace. This view holds that they will break under the pressure of military defeat, but will quit before they are seriously hurt.

They will quit not in resignation to a place among peace-loving nations, but to conserve what remains of their strength as a reserve upon which to rebuild their military machine for another try at what they believe to be the destiny of the master race—world domination.

The traits which inspired the Germans to hope for victory in the last war after the entrance of the United States assured their defeat are much more pronounced in this generation of combatant Germans. The young German soldier of today is the product of intensive master-race indoctrination since childhood, which far exceeds in effectiveness the propaganda and training of Wilhelm and his Prussian militarists.

The morale of the defeated Afrika Korps was found to be high. It had survived a sound drubbing which included a demonstration that the air support upon which the German army depends can be wiped out.

But as in the last war there may be too much reliance in Germany on the fortitude of civilians. They will be fed and made as comfortable as possible on loot from the occupied countries. They will be assured that labor drafts on the subjugated peoples give Germany a tremendous advantage. The effect of repeated bombings, of growing intensity, on German industrial centers however, is probably underestimated.

Germany is friendly and its guilt in starting the war is recognized by the entire world. Now that its defeat is assured, every casualty on both sides is a product of German depravity. No people can stand up indefinitely under that physical beating and moral indictment.

Tenure Amendment Is Certainly Needed

THE OUTCOME of several months of discussing a proposal to amend the Constitution to limit a president to two terms is a formal resolution to that effect in the Senate. It was introduced by Sen. Josiah W. Bailey, North Carolina Democrat, and referred to the Judiciary committee.

It is reported that a poll of the committee shows that most of the members favor the amendment. So far, so good. Let it be hoped similar approval will be forthcoming in the House.

The proposal is an attempt to write into the constitution the custom which until 1940 had practically the effect of a constitutional provision. Owing to the time required for passage by both branches of Congress and consideration by the states, the amendment, if adopted, could hardly be proclaimed in time to stop a Roosevelt campaign for a fourth term. But it could stop a fifth term.

Adoption of the amendment would break the grip on the presidency which has been gained in recent years by loading the federal pay roll with politicians, concentrating power in Washington, working to rub the states out and the wanton waste of borrowed money for adventures in state socialism. It would forever protect the people from men whose ambition cannot be satisfied within the safe limits of popular government.

"Taxation according to ability to pay" has been discarded as a shibboleth by those politicians who admit that they love the common people. The little fellow has discovered, at last, what it means.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Max Radin, professor of law in the University of California, is not one who believes that all of our energies should be devoted to the immediate process of winning the war—and that no attention, now, should be given to what must follow. He has therefore, described in a little book, "The Day of Reckoning" (Knopf), a book which, if it were allowed to circulate if only a little in Germany, would do its part to pull the German people away from their mad masters and, to that extent shorten this war.

Radin has chosen to describe a great trial in Luxembourg in 1945, at which the criminals Hitler, Goebbels, Himmler, Funk, Goestel, Milch and Ribbentrop (Goering was killed in a bombing in 1944) are brought before the bar of justice and tried for their crimes. They are reduced to the level of common murderers and charged with the killing of Jacques Dubsque, a French hostage; of Jan Studiska, a Czech, for disrespect to the head of the German state; and of Joseph Kellisky, a Russian Jewish soldier, merely BECAUSE he was a Jew.

They are not charged with the rape of Austria, the bombing of Rotterdam, the massacre of Lidice, the starvation of Greece, or "the methodical cold-blooded murder of millions of Jews"—but with "three little puny murders of unimportant and insignificant persons."

The conduct of the judges is scrupulously, almost irritatingly fair, the fury of the audience is never allowed to give voice, and their attorney is an able man who is thwarted only by the refusal of his clients to admit the authority of the court. Nevertheless he contends that the executions of the Frenchman and the Czech were military acts of war, not murder, and for the death of the Jewish soldier he pleads the irresponsibility of Hitler in the grip of his anti-racial mania.

Relentlessly out of his great fund of legal knowledge he draws the defendants closer and closer within the shadow of condemnation but with such exquisite fairness that at times one wonders if the criminals will not escape their deserved doom. . . . Max Radin's "The Day of Reckoning" is a fascinating and thrilling achievement.

Irving Stone, author of "Last for Life," "Sailor on Horseback" etc. is, you may have guessed, no favorite of the Browser. And when he first heard that Mr. Stone was buying himself with a book about the men who ran for the presidency—and lost—his first thought was: "What's the sense of that? Why bother with the losers in politics?" But the Browser was mistaken. In "They Also Ran" (Doubleday Doran) is a lively and valuable book. In it Mr. Stone has analyzed each of the "Also Rans" from Henry Clay and Greeley, Fremont and McClellan, Lewis Cass, John W. Davis, and Horatio Seymour, Bryan and Hughes, to Al Smith and Willie and each asks the question: "What kind of president would this man have made?"

Who is the "famous humorist" who wrote "The Sex Refresher" (Howell Sosen) under the pseudonym of Cleo El Anthony? A lively and somewhat naughty book and many of its phrases suggest that the author isn't a youth. The Browser has a strong hunch that the author is Franklin P. Adams.

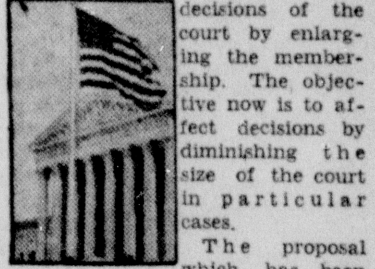

Milton H. Shutes, author of "Lincoln and California" (Stanford Press) is an Oakland doctor whose hobby has been Lincolniana for many years. An able winnowing of all connections of Lincoln with California. Prodigious and patient research have produced a valuable addition to the author's own field. . . . That's all from Marsh Maslin.

New Deal Again Tries To Tamper With High Court

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, June 12 — The New Deal has begun again to tamper with the Supreme Court of the United States. The objective before was to change the decisions of the court by enlarging the membership. The objective now is to affect decisions by diminishing the size of the court in particular cases.

The proposal which has been advanced by the attorney general in behalf of the Roosevelt administration is in the form of a bill which, if passed by Congress, would permit five justices to constitute a quorum. Thus three justices could constitute a majority of the court.

The reason why there occasionally is difficulty about a quorum is that some of the justices disqualify themselves from sitting in cases in which they have had a part in private life or in which they may have participated while connected with the department of Justice or some other agency of the government.

There are two important cases before the supreme court today for which admittedly there is no quorum of six members available, because four of the nine justices have disqualified themselves. Three of them were formerly connected with the department of Justice and one of them had a remote connection with the parties through his law firm many years ago. They have declined to sit on the cases.

Trials Are Wanted

But the Roosevelt administration wants both cases tried. One concerns the Aluminum Company of America, which won in the lower court, and the other concerns the North American Company in a test suit of the constitutionality of the so-called "death sentence" or holding company law. The latter case was won by the department of Justice in the United States Circuit Court of appeals.

If the proposal to change the quorum from six to five justices had been advanced when the calendar was clear of any pending cases that could be affected by the legislation the bill would rest, so to speak, on sounder ground. But where legislation is asked specifically to affect the results in particular cases, the episode is reminiscent of the disgraceful chapter in the history of Congress when a law was passed in the midst of litigation taking a case out of the jurisdiction of the supreme court so that the lower court decision would stand. This was in the post-civil war days, and the case is known as "In re Savin." A Mississippi editor who criticized the military governor of that area.

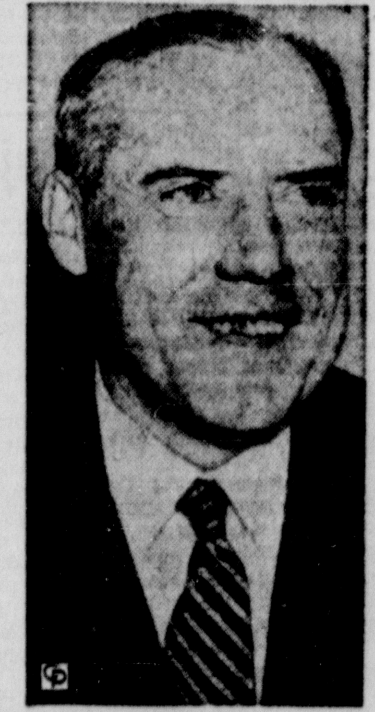

Old Principle Maintained

It so happens that the new bill, if passed, would not permit the North American case to be disposed of, because it is a tradition of the supreme court pronounced as far back as 1834 by Chief Justice Marshall that "the practice of the court is not to deliver any judgment in cases where constitutional questions are involved unless four judges concur in the opinion, thus making the decision that of a majority of the whole court."

In those days the court membership was seven, but the principle of majority concurrence to decide a constitutional question has been maintained by the court ever since. So with the North American case, which involves a constitutional question, eliminated even by the proposed five-justice quorum, the only case involved would be that against the aluminum company.

This is part of the New Deal's vengeful persecution against a company which stood trial for five long years and was vindicated by Judge Caffey, of the United States District Court. A motion to dismiss the case and let the lower court decision stand—which is the rule whenever there is a tie vote, for instance—

Businessman Element Is Seen on Way Out in New War Mobilization Setup

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 13—War Mobilizer Byrnes' appointments and actions are subtly working in the direction of taking over control of all war production and domestic economy from the businessman element in government.

Interesting Suggestion

Representative Sumners, of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary committee, has made an interesting suggestion. It is that any case now transmitted by a district court direct to the supreme court shall be sent to the circuit court of appeals instead for final decision if there is a lack of quorum in the high court. But the administration doesn't want that procedure.

Justices on the supreme court disqualify themselves right along for one reason or another. If a bill is passed now reducing the quorum from six to five, there is nothing to prevent a request for another change from five to four. Actually if the pending bill passes, it means that out of five justices three will speak for the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Remedy Is In Their Hands

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligence

The Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier, commenting on the report of the National Resources Planning Board, describes it as the President's "declaration that the present centralization of government, with its inevitable deprivation of individual liberties growing out of the war emergency, is not for the war's duration, but is to be continued and enlarged when peace shall return."

This centralization, it points out, this substitution of state socialism for the traditional American way, has been the program of the New Deal since 1933. But "not until now has its leader, without attempt at concealment or evasion, told the Americans what they shall and must expect from him if he shall be kept in office four years after inauguration day in 1945."

This is, we feel, clear vision. Moreover, the repugnance of the Charleston editor to socialism is shared, we believe, by an overwhelming percentage of the people of the South. Nowhere, we are convinced, is loyalty to the traditional American way stronger than in the South.

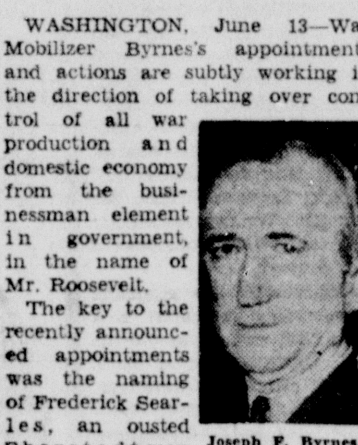

Well, the voters of the South have it within their power to prevent this violation. Present indications are that Mr. Roosevelt will seek a fourth term. If he doesn't, be sure the nominee will be satisfactory to him. That means that he will be a man like Henry Wallace, say, who would carry on where Mr. Roosevelt left off.

The South always has voted for Mr. Roosevelt, as for all other men running on the Democratic ticket. Where the South to vote for the Republican nominee this time, the New Deal's defeat would be practically assured.

Does preservation of the American system of government seem important enough in the South to justify the desertion of a meaningless party label? Only time will tell.

Morning Motto

Few men have the virtue to withstand the highest bidder.—WASHINGTON.

Joseph F. Byrnes

Substantiating this interpretation was Mr. Byrnes' choice of a former secretary to Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter (Edward F. Pritchard) to keep an eye on Fred Vinson in the Office of Economic Stabilization, as an assistant.

Baruch, Too

Fitting in also with this new picture was the appointment of Bernard Baruch by Mr. Byrnes as an official advisor with a desk in the office. Baruch has always been Mr. Byrnes' primary advisor, and in fact, his godfather in politics.

They are fellow South Carolinians, and have always worked together. But in this production situation, Mr. Baruch has largely sided with the army and with the New Dealers against the Nelson-Wilson influence.

The changes certainly mean that either the army or the New Dealers or both will take the directing controls hereafter to the diminishing influence of those who have headed the war production effort heretofore.

Production has been an astounding success even beyond the hopes of those who have directed it. We have more than enough bullets for every German and Jap already at hand, and the output of tanks and other machines of war has been so great as to actually constitute a problem of distribution in many lines. The only items worth worrying about have been big bombers and shipping.

Certainly the time has arrived when the politicians think they can successfully take over.

Strategy Conference Results

First results of the Roosevelt-Churchill strategy conference are becoming apparent in the new campaign to dim the obvious facts of the war situation into the Axis mind in expectation of forcing an early collapse.

Every Churchill action since leaving Washington is in furtherance of this new propaganda war of nerves. Reports from within Germany, which he submitted at the White House meeting, obviously have stimulated the expectations that the German will to war can be conquered and crushed by confronting it daily with the inevitability of its ultimate military defeat.

respect to the fullest, but all are co-operating to give the experiment a full trial.

The trouble is that this plan can only bring results through a revolutionary movement within Germany and Italy to overthrow the clinging control.

Ordinary governments, in the face of the military situation now confronting the Axis, would have collapsed long ago but the militant regimes in Berlin and Rome have such a stranglehold on their people as to enable them to continue to exist even without popular support.

NLB Tottering

The question of the future of the War Labor Board is being discussed within the New Deal higher circle. Its prestige has suffered in its dealings with John L. Lewis.

Some authorities expect it to be reorganized or revised. Others wish to implement it with new legal powers. It does not have legal authority commensurate with its responsibilities. It does not even have the power to subpoena. If it had, it would have been able to compel the attendance of Mr. Lewis.

Certain it is that the WLB will either go up or out.

Muddle-headed Rationing

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

The Office of Price Administration is still at it. The new registration for rationing and preserving sugar is freshest evidence that Washington bureaucrats must be thinking up complicated methods of rationing to justify their continuation in office.

According to OPA regulations, each member of a family is permitted twenty-five pounds of sugar for the rationing season. The easiest way to arrange distribution would be to declare one of the regular stamps worth its normal five pounds—plus twenty-five pounds for rationing. If the ration-book owner requested it.

That was too simple for OPA, however. Far too simple. Furthermore, it did not net statistics on how much rationing each family did last year, and what it hoped to do this year. Statistics of this sort are valuable, you know. They fill empty filing cases.

As a result, sixty-seven high-priced OPA consultants were required to work seven hours overtime nightly for seven weeks to conceive a program which would not only confound, confuse and inconvenience the public, but which would waste valuable time that otherwise might be devoted to the war effort—possibly even valuable gasoline and rubber.

Under the plan hatched by the bureaucrats, those who desire to get rationing sugar must stand in line to register. Standing in line is a pet of the OPA experts. It also involves requiring a clerk—or in the case of the sugar, a school teacher—to stand in line also. And, as everyone knows, it's much better for two people to stand in line than one.

Two of the stamps in No. 1 ration book are earmarked for rationing sugar. That's ten pounds. Then you are issued a supplemental order worth fifteen pounds. It all adds

Aviation Is Likely Subject for Next World Conference

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

The next international conference apropos post-war world relationships is likely to bear upon the subject of aviation.

Next peace-time's major aviation powers naturally will be the United States and Great Britain. However, all the other nations even if they do not do much actual flying of their own, each will have its convenient little patches for our own and John Bull's planes to alight on, and these ports will have to be bargained for.

The dickering will be in competition between ourselves and the British, with the governments will be rivals to make terms with.

In a couple of three generations perhaps we will have today's Axis aviation companies trying to horn in on what will then be our pretty well established Anglo-American monopoly, but they will amount to nothing immediately at the war's end.

Two Plain Reasons

For one thing, their countries will be licked into financial quiescence and submission. Secondly, they will have no commercial equipment for a long time to come, and we are building ours now to move our supplies of fighting material—aircraft that can be converted in short order into passenger-carrying and freight-carrying utility.

There will be no delay as between ourselves and the British though.

In two respects there are whippersnappers that the Britons are considerably ahead of us.

Centuries of Experience

Overseas monopoly was one of their great advantages before the United States ever was invented. It was surface navigation but it was overseas anyway. So they have experience, centuries of it. Overseas is overseas, whether overhead or simply on top of them, at sea level.

Secondly, from all accounts the trans-Atlantic islanders are creating their air establishment largely at our expense.

They are doing it on a lease-lend basis. We are footing the current bills. The theory is that we will be repaid ultimately, but everybody knows how international obligations string along, as they evaporate into futurity.

Aviators Conservative

Not even an expert, to be sure, can calculate how, in the long run, inter-oceanic and inter-air will pan out in opposition to one another. Surface transportationists say they are not worried and aviators, with their claims, conservatives—in so far as it is possible for an aviator to be a conservative.

It appears that passenger-toting by plane is admittedly more expensive than riding in a smoking car unless you are in quite a hurry. Aviation does not dispute it. Baggage, though, can wait a bit. Yet, if you are in a heck of a rush, it is readily conceded by the surface folk, that they cannot keep up with the astronomical outfit. Ditto, scrapiron and piglead are more economically moved close to the terrestrial surface.

May Be Secret

In wartime NOTHING matters—but this discussion relates to post-war days.

The next international conference will see it paved over.

It may be as secret as the Hot Springs, Va., discussion. It will be more business-minded in its nature. Industrialists will boss it, and they are more practical than politicians.

Their aviation discussion may shape the ultimate heavenly world for us.

It is likely to shape the terrestrial world, also.

It is a discussion that is impending.

The food question is not any hotter than that one is. Every little peewee of a country is hit by it. And the big ones? Gosh!

up to twenty-five pounds—provided you've stood in line long enough and made the proper statistical answers to the proper statistical questions.

The American people do not object to rationing, in principle. They realize it's the fairest method of distributing hard-to-get goods. But they do resent muddle-headedness. And when it comes to muddle-headedness, the OPA usually stands at the head of the class.

Laboratory Examinations Contribute Much to Medical Diagnosis Picture

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In articles which have appeared during the last two weeks, we began to go over in a systematic way the methods of diagnosis which the physician uses. The purpose of this series of articles is to try to explain what your doctor is trying to get at in his examination of you.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

We stated that the most important part of the diagnosis consisted in the information obtained by taking the history of the illness in the patient's own words. Then we discussed the physical examination, which is the information the doctor obtains by employing his senses of sight, feeling and hearing—in other words, the changed appearance of the patient's skin is seen, the feeling of the pulse and the use of the stethoscope to listen to the chest, etc.

Most people, we believe, do not appreciate how important these two procedures are. We estimated that the history contributes at least fifty per cent to the final diagnosis and the physical examination by the physician's unaided senses, twenty-five per cent, so that seventy-five per cent of the diagnosis is made before any laboratory procedure is introduced at all.

When one asks what are the most important laboratory examinations which are used in diagnosis, I believe most physicians would agree that the routine examination of the urine and the blood would be selected. It is well over 100 years since Richard Bright first found that in certain cases of kidney disease the urine would precipitate a coagulable substance when boiled. Bright used a teaspoon and a candle, where today we use a test tube and a Bunsen burner. The urine is a fluid which represents the excretion of many waste products from the body. When I was beginning practice, they used to estimate many of these, such as the urea and the uric acid. But this has been found to be of little information.

One excretory product is sugar which may be an overflow from carbohydrate metabolism, which indicates diabetes. Anyone over 40 years of age should have the urine examined once a year in order to determine whether this condition has started or not, because it can be successfully controlled if taken in time.

When the kidney or the bladder is diseased, various cells, blood or other products appear in the urine and these indicate local disease and they can be seen with the microscope.

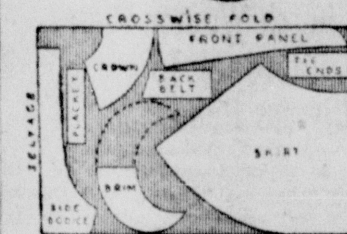

Examination of Blood
A routine examination of the blood can be done very simply merely by obtaining a drop of blood from the lobe of the ear, allowing it to absorb on soft paper and comparing it to a color scale which shows how much hemoglobin is present. The blood is impoverished by so many organic diseases* that this gives a very good indication as to whether conditions have gone far enough to be serious or not. Of course, if this test indicates a low hemoglobin, the red cells can be counted and should be five million on our standard. The white cells of the blood can also be counted and indicate whether or not the body is responding to an infection.

Another blood test that can be done quickly and which indicates whether the patient has an organic or a functional disease is the so-called sedimentation rate test. In organic disease the blood cells are heavy and settle to the bottom of the tube more rapidly than normal. This is a yardstick to determine whether or not the patient is really sick.

Comedy, "He's My Guy," Has Diamond Brothers

The Diamond Brothers, veterans of vaudeville, musical comedy and the night clubs, despite their collegiate-aged appearance, are seen and heard prominently in "He's My Guy." The Universal comedy feature starring Joan Davis is now at the Liberty theater. Alike as peas in the proverbial pod, the Diamond boys are three in number, and unless you know them most intimately, don't try to distinguish one from the other. They won't offer any help in that respect; in fact, they're so alike they don't bother to keep their shirts and socks separated. They're just the Diamond boys, separately and collectively, and that's how they want it.

Bucs Win First Game of Season From Cards, 10-3

Second Game Called after 12 Innings with Score Tied 4-4

ST. LOUIS, June 13 (AP)—In a wild game, the Pittsburgh Pirates today won their first game of the season from the St. Louis Cardinals, 10-3, in a wild hitting spree and then held the world champion Cardinals to a twelve-inning, 4 to 4 tie in the nightcap, called on account of darkness.

There were no holes in the bats of the players today. In the two games, which consumed five hours and fifty-one minutes, there was a total of fifty-two hits, including eleven doubles, two triples and one home run. The Pirates won their first game from the Cardinals this season in the opener, reaping a harvest of seven runs the first frame and overhauling two hurlers before Murry Dickson finally halted the fiasco.

Southpaw Willie Herbert went the distance for Pittsburgh, winning his fourth game against three losses. That first affair lasted two hours and thirty-five minutes and 16,255 fans settled down to what they thought would be a close, fast-played nightcap.

The game was close, and it also was wrought with thrills—but it dragged to three hours and sixteen minutes.

The Pirates scored in the first inning on two walks, a wild pitch and an outfield fly. They added another in the third on a single, a pair of walks and an outfield fly. However, the Cards came back strong in their half of the third to push across three runs.

Harry Walker singled. Debs Garms doubled him to third and Stan Musial was passed intentionally. Pitcher Bob Klinger walked Ken O'Dea to score Walker. Then Johnny Hopp doubled to left field, scoring Garms and Musial.

The Cards added another run in the sixth on a single, sacrifice and double, but the Pirates in the next inning tied the count on Elbie Fletcher's third home run of the year with a man on base.

There matters stood until darkness forced a halt to activities. The Cardinals' lead was cut to one game as Brooklyn split a twin bill with Boston. The scores:

CUT OFF A FEW KALE LEAVES AT A TIME

LEAF OF SCOTCH CURLED KALE

Kale for Victory Garden Vitamins

By growing kale in the Victory garden one can supply the table with salad greens during fall, winter and spring. Kale is an excellent source of vitamins A, B, C and a good source of B1. Kale can be eaten raw or cooked as one would spinach. Of least importance is its use as a garnish for other dishes.

Kale is a sort of cabbage which does not form a head. It is hardy in any temperature above zero and frost seems to improve its quality.

In the Victory garden a few leaves of kale can be cut at a time for various kitchen uses. As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, it is not necessary to cut the entire plant as is done for market purposes. The leaves of kale should be used while they are a bright green, for as they become older they take on a darker color and become more tough.

Dwarf green Scotch Curled kale, as illustrated, has very curly leaves and is short stemmed. This variety as well as the Siberian variety is recommended. Siberian kale is bluish in color and considered the hardier, therefore, it is used for late plantings. Siberian kale may remain in the garden throughout the entire winter, covered with hay, straw or other litter and cut when desired or left for spring use.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

TOO FEW OR TOO MANY

QUESTIONS regarding too few or too many cards in a hand, as discovered during the play, or either more than one or else none at all played to a trick, are covered very thoroughly in the new Laws of Contract Bridge. Here are the regulations governing them:

1. If, during the play period, a hand is found to have too few cards, careful search should be made for the missing card. If it is not found at all or until after the players abandon their hands, or if it is found in another player's hand, these must be a new deal. If it is found in a trick, it is treated as covered in paragraph 3 below. If it is found elsewhere, it must be placed in the deficient hand, and if it belongs to a defender whose partner has seen its face, it becomes a penalty card, or if a player (other than dummy) has revoked due to failure to play it, the revoke law applies. If the missing card is subject to both the penalty card and revoke laws, only the revoke law may be enforced.

2. If, during the play period, a hand is found to have too many cards, the reason should be ascertained. If the surplusage is attributable to (a) picking up too many cards or to an imperfect pack, or if the players abandon their hands before ascertaining the reason for the surplusage, there must be a new deal; (b) failure to play to a trick, paragraph 3 below applies; (c) acquiring a card from the other pack, said card must forthwith be restored to the other pack (if said card has been played to a trick, play proceeds as though the offender had not played to the defective trick and paragraph 3 below applies).

low applies, and in addition, if said card has won a defective trick to which that paragraph applies, one trick is transferred, after play ceases, to the non-offending side).

3. If a hand has played too many cards or not at all to a trick, and attention is called to the irregularity (a) before a player of each side has played to the next trick, it must be rectified, and where other laws also fit the case, the penalties under them apply; (b) after a player of each side has played to the next trick, the defective trick stands as played, and (1) a hand with too few cards plays the hand out, does not play to the final trick, or tricks, and if it wins a trick with its last card the lead passes in rotation; (2) a hand with too many cards forthwith faces a card and, if possible, one it could properly have played to the defective trick, and the card so faced is added to the defective trick, but does not change its ownership.

Neon Lights Help Umps Judge Fouls

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—The Chattanooga Southern Association baseball club has a novel arrangement in its park to help prevent arguments over whether a long fly in a night game is fair or foul.

Long neon light tubes on the left and right field walls form a vertical continuation of the foul lines, enabling an umpire sighting down the line on a close one to decide whether the ball is fair or foul.

Sea-lions swallow small, round pebbles, apparently as an aid to digestion.

James Reed, 36, Killed Instantly

Body Is Found Six Hours Later; Happened Near Thomas Street

Struck by a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train near Thomas and Third streets late Saturday night, James Reed, 36-year-old City Ice and Fuel Company employee, 19 Somerville avenue, was instantly killed. His body was found at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Officials said they believed Reed was struck and killed by No. 17, a westbound passenger train arriving in this city at 11:40 p. m. Dr. Linne M. Corson, deputy county medical examiner, placed the time of death at 11:38 p. m.

Blood on Train

When No. 17 stopped at Queen City station Saturday night, blood was discovered on the locomotive and cars. Two crews were dispatched to attempt to locate the victim of the train but were unsuccessful.

The body was found yesterday morning by a B. and O. conductor named Holbert who notified authorities. The body was identified at Hafer's funeral home by Reed's brother, William Reed, a B. and O. yardmaster.

Dr. Corson said Reed's body was badly mangled.

Reed had been visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. Howard A. Grimm, 178 Thomas street, but left there at 11:20 p. m. to go to his home for his work clothes. He planned to return to his sister's home before going to work at the City Ice and Fuel Company in the eastbound yards.

Born at Gilmore

A son of the late William and Jane Mullin Reed, he was born at Gilmore but came to Cumberland when he was about three years of age. He was unmarried.

Surviving are two brothers, John M. Reed, Brunswick; William Reed, Cumberland; six sisters, Mrs. Jane Currier, Mrs. Mary Clem, Mrs. Elizabeth Grimm, Mrs. Ruth Friedman, Mrs. Sarah O'Neill, all of Cumberland; and Mrs. Agnes Hartman, Keyser, W. Va.

The body is at Hafer's funeral home.

NORMAL PRODUCTION IS EXPECTED SOON AT CELANESE PLANT

With the filtration section placed in operation yesterday and workers in one of the three damaged spinning blocks returning to their jobs today, normal production at the Celanese corporation is expected to be reached in about three weeks.

The plant resumed operations yesterday after being shut down since 5 a. m. Saturday to permit an overhauling of the electrical system.

Small numbers of those thrown out of work by the explosion June 3 are being employed in preliminary jobs prior to opening of closed departments, and larger numbers are expected to return tomorrow.

Fred T. Small, plant manager, says that every effort is being made to place the plant back into full production as soon as possible, and the time elapsing between the completion of repairs and starting work may be only a few minutes in some cases.

Rotarians Will See Picture Tomorrow

A sound film in technicolor, entitled "An Auto Trip through South America," will be featured at the regular weekly meeting of the Rotary club tomorrow at 12:15 p. m. at Central Y. M. C. A. Prepared under the direction of the co-ordinator of Inter-American affairs, the film is said to be a superior example of the film art.

Women Workers Who Marry Urged To Notify Social Security Board

Many Applying for Benefits Find Change of Name Not Recorded

Henry M. Millhouser, manager of the local field office of the Social Security board, yesterday suggested that all women who have married since their original social security card was issued should have their name recorded.

Since the Celanese explosion last Thursday, June 3, many women who applied for unemployment insurance have discovered that their names should have been changed. It will be helpful to the employment office, to the Social Security office and to the workers insofar as current and future benefits are concerned, Millhouser explained, if the change is made soon.

Insurance Building Up

Millhouser also urged new workers in this section to safeguard their rights under the federal old-age and survivors insurance system.

Holder of Coupon No. 17 Fill Shoe Stores as Deadline Nears

Demand for Sport Shoes Is Greater Than Ever, Dealer Declares

"The line forms to the right" was the pass word in local coupon 17 exchanges last week as procrastinating consumers sought to redeem the little square that was rated more valuable than money in the last few days of its existence and caused a last minute rush to the shoe bar.

Typical of the situation along the main stem was that in one of Cumberland's most representative shoe stores, which has a seating capacity for 140 customers. From ten minutes after the store opened at 9 a. m. Saturday until long after the doors were locked at 9 o'clock that night, not a chair was empty, the manager said. And several times even standing room was at a premium.

Sport Shoes in Demand

Besides the natural tendency of human beings to procrastinate, shoe dealers also attributed the dead line buying to the consumers' expectation of more and greater variety in summer shoes or a larger supply and selection of sport shoes. The expectation was not met, however, they said, because instead of an increased production in shoes for civilian use, manufacturers have had to experience just the opposite.

The demand for sports shoes was the greatest, dealers said, and gave as the reason "just say you can't have it, and the people will create a demand for it." One said that if a successful response is desired, just have the government say you can't do it, and as has happened in the shoe industry the response will be phenomenal.

Shoe manufacturers have been cut down to sixty per cent of last year's production and government contracts have priority in that percentage. After them, civilian needs can be taken care of, merchants said. To combat the danger of being sold out of business, some stores are limiting the number of pairs of shoes they sell in one day. Salesmen are given allotments on certain priced shoes, and when they reach that allotment, their other sales must go to other salesmen. This is cited as another means of balancing the situation.

Buyers Quality Conscious

Local merchants said that buyers are more quality conscious than ever and lengthy wear seems to be the principal criterion. They also are demanding one extreme or the other.

The insurance rights of these workers are building up. Millhouser explained, and may provide not only monthly payments for themselves but also offer protection to their families, wives, widows, young children and in some cases the parents of the insured workers may be entitled to monthly payments. The following steps were suggested to safeguard insurance rights:

Find out whether your job is covered by the old-age and survivors insurance system.

Preserve Your Card

Secure a social security number account card if you do not already have one.

Show your social security card to every employer, either for full or part time work.

If your social security card is lost or damaged get another card with the same number.

If you have more than one card, find out which one you should keep. Take good care of your social security card. If you lose it, it will cost the government money to replace it.

Cause of Fatal Injury to Atwell Is Believed Known

Celanese Employee Testifies Virginia Avenue Man Fell Down Hotel Stairs

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris said yesterday that the cause of an injury that proved fatal to William Franklin Atwell, 64, 415 Virginia avenue, has probably been determined.

A seventeen-year-old Celanese plant employee, Paul Shuck, Hendricks hotel, testified, Harris said, that he saw Atwell fall down nine steps at the entrance of the hotel, landing on his head.

An autopsy performed by Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy county medical examiner, revealed that Atwell died from a skull fracture in back of his right ear. His body was covered with bruises, Dr. Corson said.

Standing at Entrance

Shuck testified, according to Harris, that he was standing at the entrance to the hotel when Atwell, who weighed about 250 pounds and was about six feet two inches tall, fell down the steps.

Atwell, Shuck told the state's attorney, rubbed his head after fall, then stood up, rubbed his head again and then walked off.

Although the cause of the injuries has probably been determined, Harris said he intends to continue the investigation in an effort to complete the case.

Time of Atwell's fall on the stairs was placed at 2:30 p. m. on June 5, nine hours before he was arrested by Officers R. M. Nuse and J. W. Brown on a charge of intoxication. Atwell was held in city jail until 10 p. m. June 6 when he was removed to Allegheny hospital.

Died June 10

Atwell died June 10 after being in a semi-conscious condition after his admission to the hospital.

Harris said an effort will be made to connect the case from the time of Atwell's fall on Saturday afternoon until he was admitted to the hospital.

Funeral services for Atwell were held at 2:30 p. m. yesterday in the Hafer funeral home with the Rev. E. S. Price, pastor of Second Baptist church, officiating. Interment was in Hillcrest burial park.

Pallbearers were Floyd Price, F. E. Naughton, Lloyd Mullen, Webster K. Edwards, Harry K. Poling and Virgil Stemple.

Significance Of American Flag Stressed

Program by Local Elks Lodge Is Broadcast over WTBO

The significance of the flag of the United States was the theme of the special ritualistic service held yesterday in celebration of Flag week by Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B. P. O. Elks.

The program, which was broadcast over station WTBO, was conducted by Exalted Ruler George L. Lyming, assisted by Herman Ball, Lester Denen and Michael F. O'Neill. John Mosner gave a history of the flag in which he paralleled its evolution with that of the American government.

Traces Flag's Growth

"The evolution of the American flag is as interesting as the evolution of the American government," he said. "Its original instability is now matched by a peerless immobility. During the period of its growth and lack of finality it embraced parts of the banners of other countries—sometimes showing even shrubs and serpents, and being devoid of originality."

"This period of instability of the form and coloring of our flag," he continued, "ceased with the definite fixing of the government it represented. When nationality became assured . . . when state independence and state interdependence were exactly measured . . . when responsibility and international place were no longer open for debate . . . then and not till then, the flag became definite."

Mosner then traced the complete development of the nation's standard, pointing out its temporal significance. "It is at once a history, a declaration and a prophecy," he declared. "It represents the American nation as it was at its birth; it speaks for what it is today and it holds the opportunity for the future to add other stars to the glorious constellation."

Elks Require Observance

He also pointed out that the Order of Elks was the first and yet, is the only fraternal organization which requires the celebration of Flag day. It began the observance in 1908 and has made it mandatory in Elks lodges ever since.

James E. Yarnall made a responsive address in which he described the heritage of the flag and paralleled the symbols of its significance with those of Elksdom. He gave an account of the story written in the flag from its creation to what it stands for today.

The final address in the Flag week observance by the Elks will be made by John Mosner tonight at 6:15 o'clock over station WTBO. Michael F. O'Neill is chairman of the Elks and George L. Lyming planned the observances for the city.
